Bright Coffee Shop Performance Insights

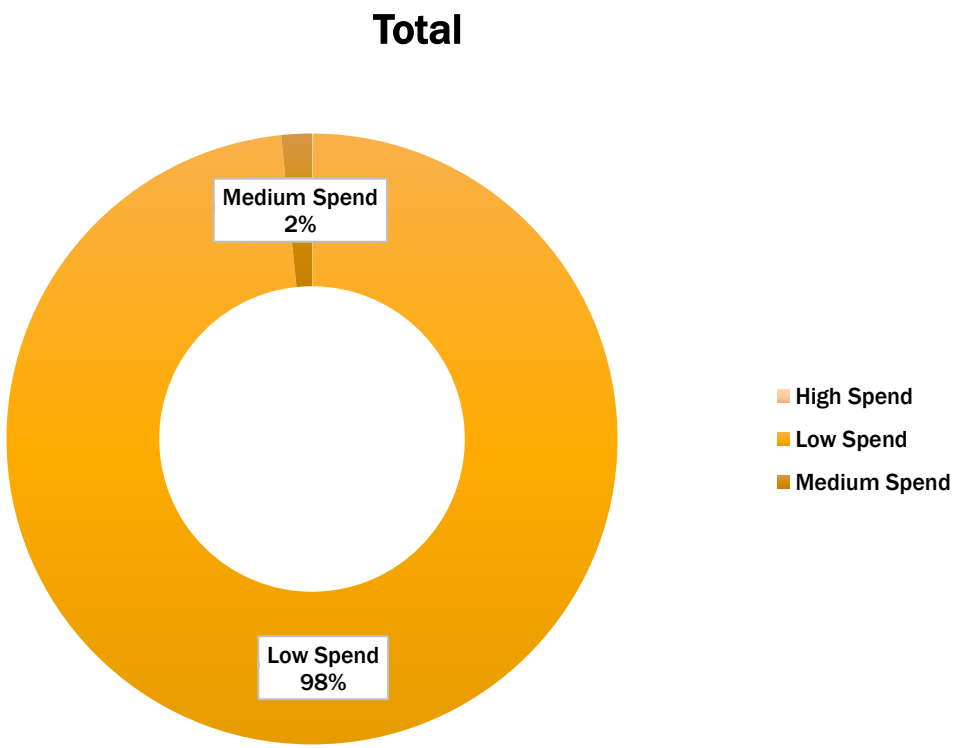
The purpose of the of the case study is to dissect daily sales of the coffee shop within a six months timeframe from all locations and produce an analysis regarding the performance of the Brightlearn Coffee shop.

As soon as the analysis is complete, there needs to be clear recommendations on the next strategic steps to improve the companies' sales.

Spend Bucket Analysis

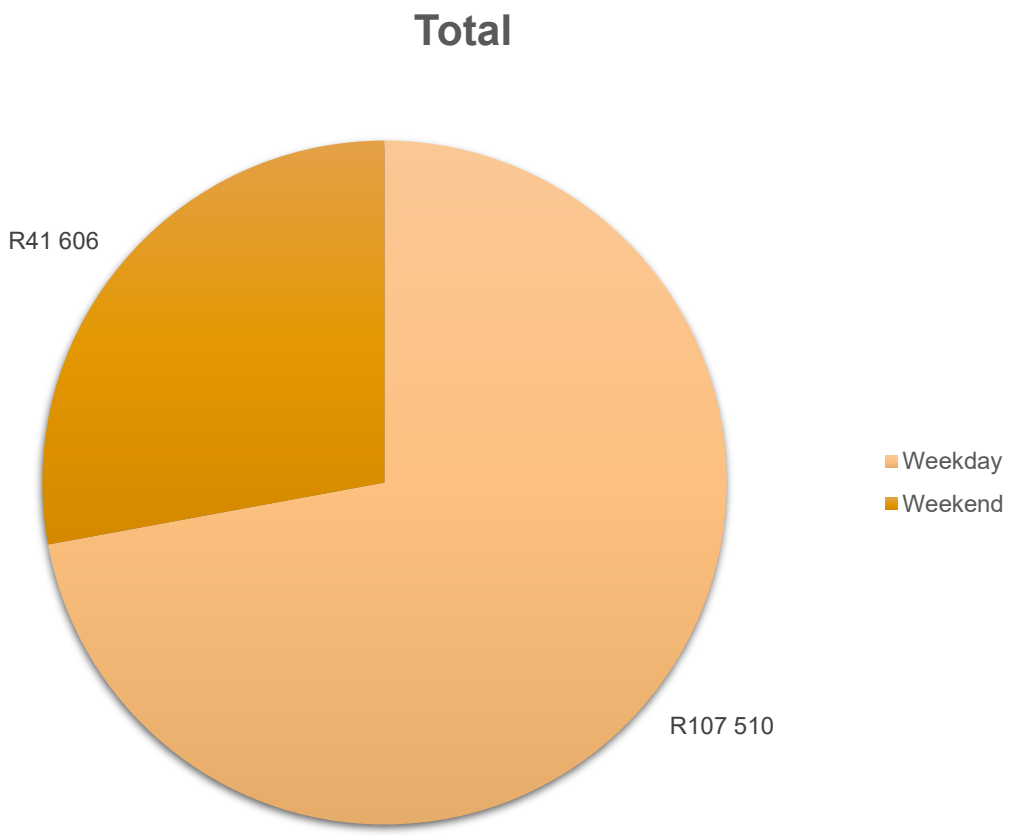
With sales per transaction being categorized as per below, this depicts the Spend Bucket:

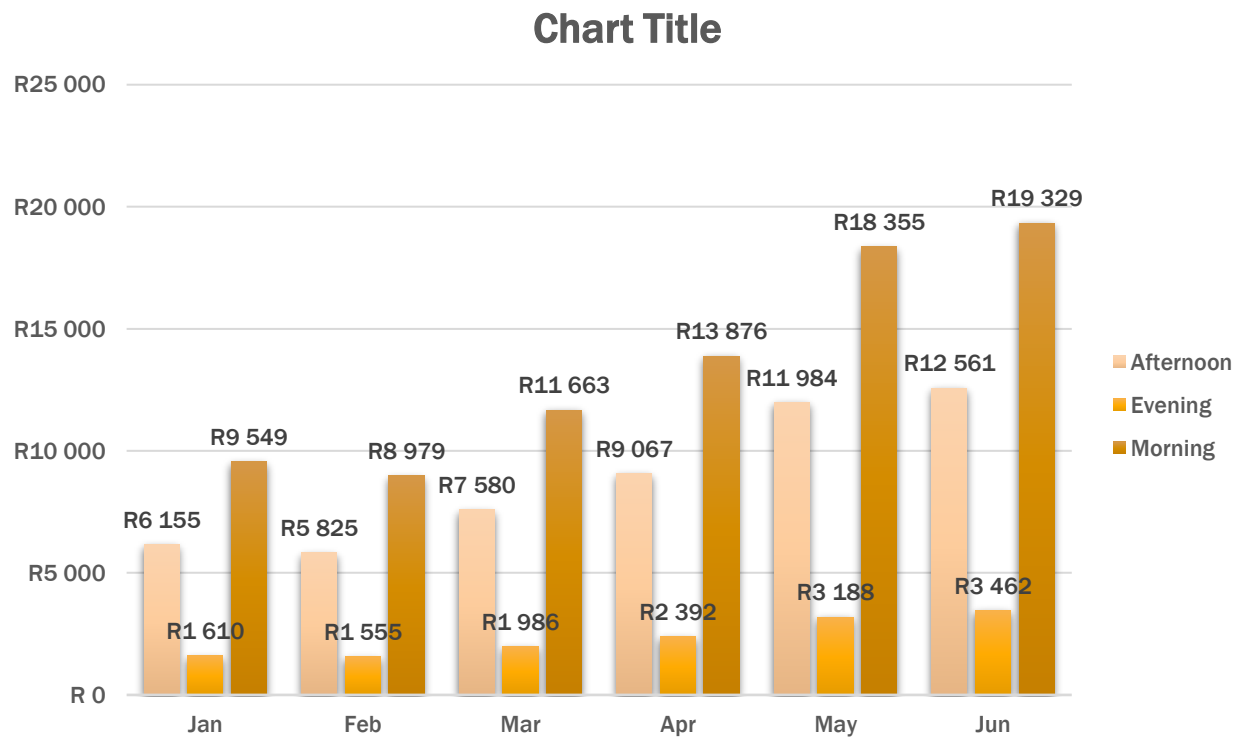
- Sales per transaction lower or equal to 50 being “Low Spend”
- Sales per transaction between 51 and 100 being “Medium Spend”
- Lastly, Sales per transaction above 100 being “High Spend”



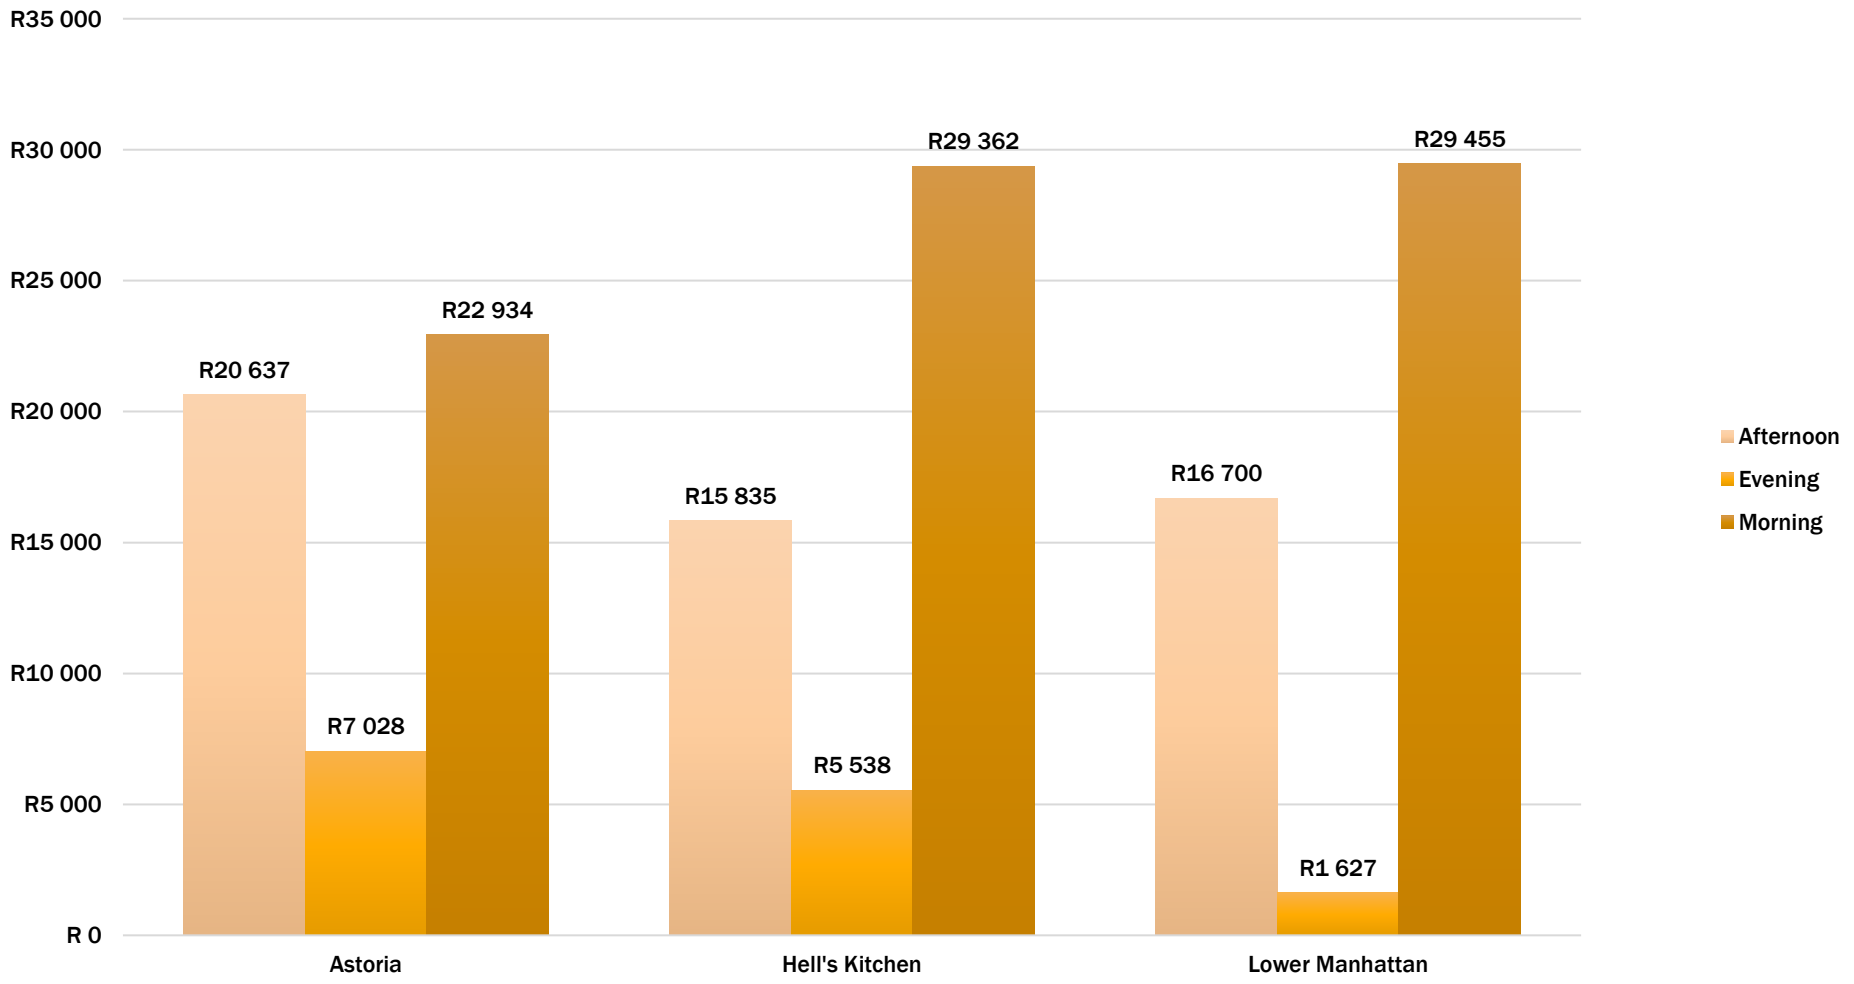
The Pie Chart shows that on the Weekdays are overall performing better than weekends. It could be because of the number of days or perhaps the fact that most workers are off on weekends as a result, there is no much activity

The below chart is displaying that mornings are generally performing better than the rest of the of the categories within the time bucket

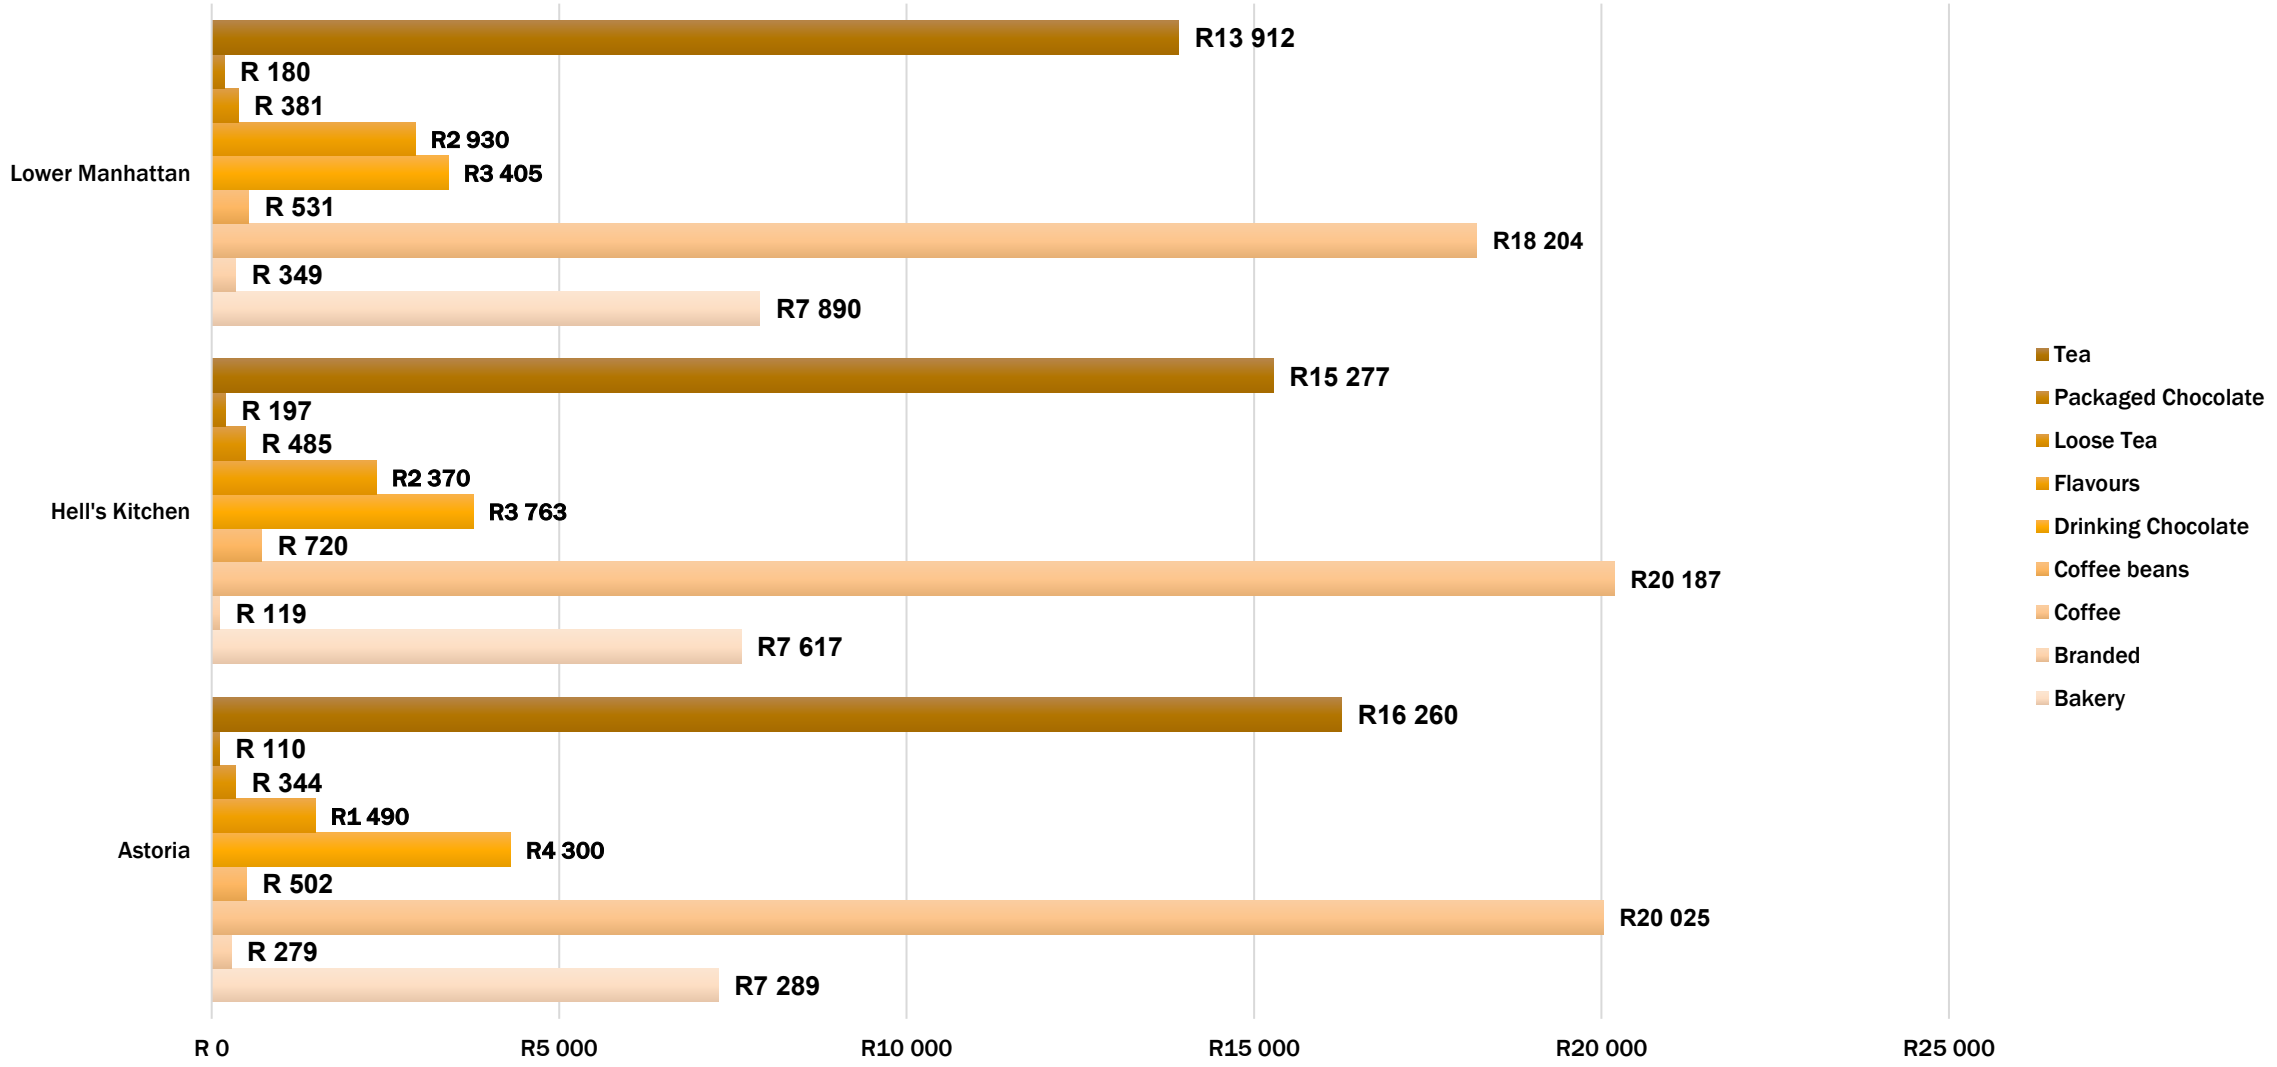




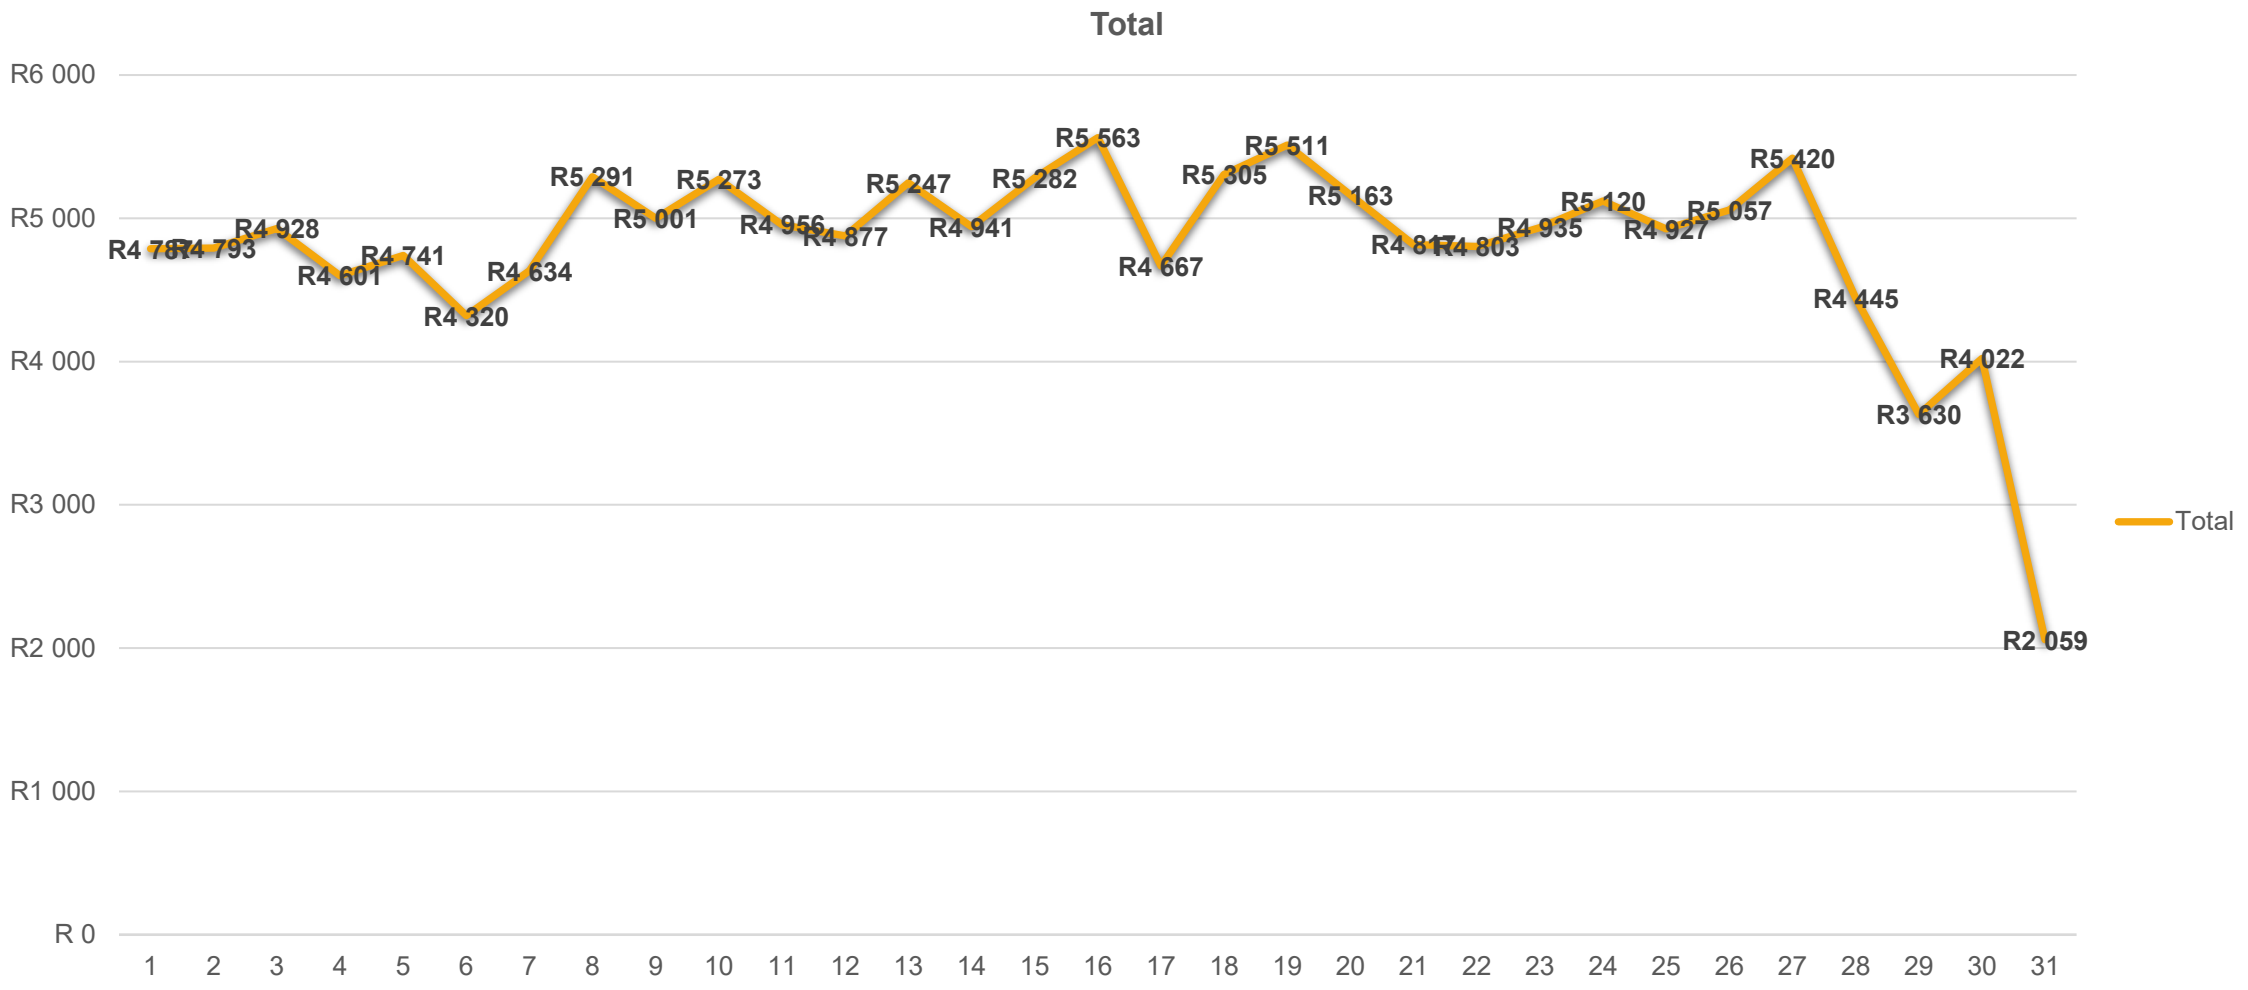
Monthly Sales by Time Bucket



Sales by location and by the respective product category



Trend Analyis by actual days within a month

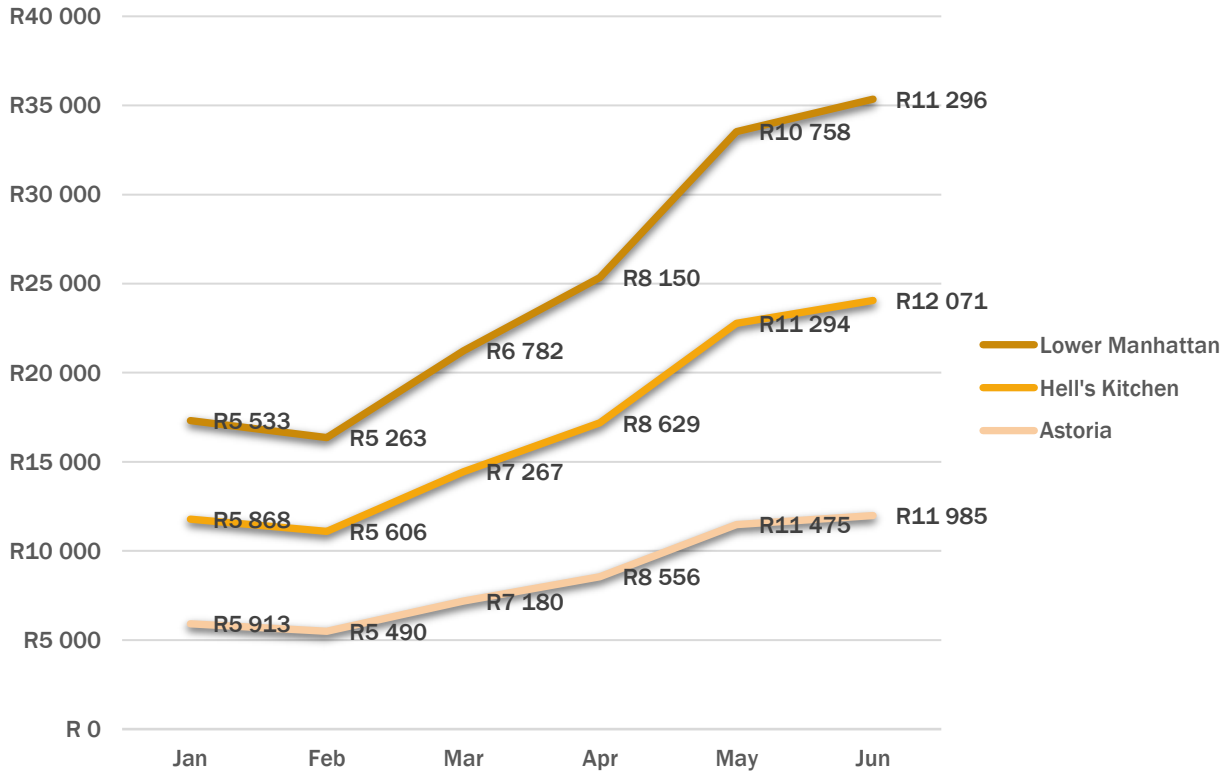


Location by month trend analysis

This trend shows all the locations and its performances by respective months.

It shows an upwards trend from January to June. Which gives an indication that customers drink hot beverages more in winter.

We can also see that Hell's Kitchen is leading when it comes to the number of sales.



Analysis

- Hell's Kitchen is performing better than all the other locations
- Mornings are also doing well in comparison to evenings and afternoons
- All locations are attracting low spenders
- The businesses generate quite a lot of sales in winter
- The coffee product category is making more sales that the rest of the categories
- Sales decline on month ends and highly increase from the 1st day of the month

Conclusion

- Bright Coffee Shop needs to have promotions on times, days and months coffee shops are not performing well
- Products that are not doing well should be marketed a lot and promotions should be centered around these products
- The coffee shop should not run out of products that are doing well, there always should be enough stock
- On months that the coffee shop is not performing well, we can give customers free coffee on their 10th purchase within the summer and autumn seasons
- We should have more social media visibilities, try scheduling posts on every second day, on all platforms and jump on suitable social media trends/challenges
- Have a database for all our customers
